This is the 3rd in a series of 'adventure' games that I have created. This title focuses on 3D graphics and some stylistic choices that I have made as the developer. Best FPS of 2016 ADWAD There are many things that are wrong with the current mainstream FPS genre, ranging from the blunt stupidity to the laziness to the repetitiveness and, of course, the idiotic selection of maps and weapons. The most important thing to understand is that it's a cakewalk to make a best FPS list and there's only a slight chance that any single game will make a splash because there are so many of them vying for attention. What I've created is a list of games based on my favorite and least favorite aspects of the current FPS. It took a long time to formulate a realistic criteria but, after weeks of grinding, what I've come up with is something that I feel fairly certain about. What I'm looking for is a game that does something that no other games are doing at the moment. It has to be something that offers a new experience, new challenges, something new and unique that, in my opinion, makes it a better experience than, say, the best FPS games of last year. It's for this reason that each of the games on the list are presented in alphabetical order and include at least one game that's become a relatively new favorite, a second choice, or perhaps a game that was merely fun during the release period, but has not yet

Iron Fisticule is a bunch of mindless, twitch-based fun. The game itself, while simple, evokes a sense of nostalgia like no other. In addition, because of the level of customizability, it offers a lot of replayability. Overall, it's a great game and thus deserves the price.5/5 Game Fiends Game "Tandem." Gameplay: Iron Fisticule is just a bunch of mindless, twitch-based fun. The game itself, while simple, evokes a sense of nostalgia like no other. In addition, because of the level of customizability, it offers a lot of replayability. Overall, it's a great game and thus deserves the price.4/5 Game Fiends Game "GT: Hori Hoshi no Yama" Gameplay: I'm not a huge fan of games like this, and I definitely have no love for the genre of console games which utilize the motion control of the player. However, I do like the art style and smooth animation. But, at the end of the day, this is just a shooter that should be played for about 30-45 minutes tops.5/5 Game Fiends Game "Oriental Love Emu" Gameplay: Compared to other motion-controlled action games, Iron Fisticule stands alone as a shining example of its genre. It delivers, for a lack of a better word, a feeling of "style" to the player. The game focuses on the quality of the experience, and it delivers in spades. It contains many features that you would not expect from a game of its sort. Overall, it's a bit underappreciated and, as such, a new fan-favorite.4/5 Dealspwn I can honestly say that I could not have played Iron Fisticule without my motion-controlled Kinect. It adds that extra flair to the game which I have never experienced before. Seriously, what more can you ask for?6/5 Dealtown Iron Fisticule is a labor of love. While most games are released and forgotten after a few weeks, Iron Fist

Words With Star Trek Online's upcoming Alternate Reality Game "A Message from a Selkie" officially launching this weekend, we thought we'd look back on the story and mechanics of Star Trek Online's first alternate reality game and go on a bit of a deep-dive into the goal, mechanics, plot and execution of the 'Titan worth a thousand words.' The story follows: The Avians, having conquered the Romulan Empire, seek a certain loan. Their candidates for credit might not come as a surprise to the Federation. The makers of the Ancient Spock Statue have found them. I know, I know. "Brilliant" you may think. "The makers of the Ancient Spock Statue?" NO. They are officialy the makers of a monument to a Vulcan Warriorship, a colossal statue being made of solid platinum. Vulcan Warriors from the past were generally made into statues as emblems of their prowess. Some took the form of Command Ships, suited in plate to evade other forms of energy or typical weapons of their era. Whether your looking at either the General Rodek model or the Warbird Rankles model, they are both celebrated monuments to the achievements and influences of Vulcan warrior culture. This is NOT the type of monument you are describing. This is a living statue, an organic, sentient warrior derived from the essence of a Vulcan Founder named Afr'a. According to Pop Culture Gallery, the Afr'a was "...different from other Founders. While others were only able to dream of living contact with their beloved Federation, Afr'a was able to animate organic structures and create entirely new life forms." They claim that all Vulcan Warriors communicate through the Voice of the Bell, a device invented as a direct interface to Afr'a's altered brainwaves. Communication through the Bell is a reserved privilege for those who have extracted the essential force of Afr'a from their bodies. For reasons unknown, Afr'a seems to have chosen his chosen warriors as humanity's last line of defense against an encroaching enemy. No one knows what they are up against, no one knows how the mission to save humanity from destruction ends, and no one knows how long it will take. To represent the renaissance of the diverse imagery of classic Star Trek from a more technological point of view. Followers
